Madame Roberge: First Impressions of Key

Mes chers enfants,

It is with gratitude that I take my pen to write some of my memories of the "old" Key School.

As I sit down at my desk, thinking, ten years of Key School, ten years of my life come flashing back to my memory together with the moments of excitement, of joy, of despondency sometimes, of anger also as we are all human beings, but most of all with wonder at the realization of the dreams of a few people, ten years ago.

Ten years ago exactly, after I had been just a few months in Annapolis, I was approached by Mrs. Darkey who wanted to know if I would be interested in starting a small private school in Annapolis, a school where French would be taught daily from the first grade on, and where children would really learn to work. After careful consideration and for a few different reasons, including the fact that I was a teacher and not an administrator, I had to refuse with the understanding that I would love to teach when such a school would be started by somebody else. Mr. Simpson, Mr. Kramer and Mr. Darkey kept thinking their dream could be realized in spite of all the difficulties involved and they were lucky enough to find Mr. Kellogg-Smith and Mrs. Fairfield to open the newly organized Key School in the fall of 1958. I was fascinated by all the reports I had heard about this new school (The Junior High School where I was teaching at the time went on Science field trips to visit the Key School (1st, 2nd and 3rd grades only) which was doing such extraordinary things in Science under the guidance of Mr. K.-S.

The "old" Key School.

When I visited the school in action, on a beautiful day in March 1959, I was greeted outside by Mr. K.-S. who was supervizing the construction of a life size African hut by the third graders as a project for their geography class . . . I was never so impressed (nor scared . . . ) in my teaching experience before . . . I will never forget that first visit to the Key School. I am fortunate enough to have been deeply involved in your school from that day on.

As you all know there were only 18 children in the old house at Horn Point that first year. When the school opened for its second year in September '59, I had 30 new names to learn. I was as scared as Jan Hamill and her fellow students as it was my first experience with such young pupils and also as I was teaching English as well as French, Geography, and History to the 3rd and 4th grades together, in one nice, big room overlooking the bay! . . . Then as now we had to work with our coats on more than once . . . We were also distracted daily by the Naval sea-planes which were taking off and "landing" on the bay right in front of us! The upstairs traffic was taking place.

We quickly outgrew our old house even though we stayed there one more year.

We opened the new Key School, at Hillsmere, with the present 7th grade in Sept. '61.

You have done such a fine job of learning to work without much supervision, you have brought such gaiety and responsibility to a part of life which is often considered as just "OK" that I have no doubt that you will face your life, whatever it may be, with as much fortitude as may be found in the leaders of tomorrow.

It has been a great privilege for me to help you grow (up) with your school. May you never lose your spirit of wonder, and as you look back to the history of the Key School, remember that with faith and work, dreams do come true, sometimes--

Bonne Chance,

Madame Roberge

HISTORY

The year mansion was acquired, William A. Darkey took one year leave of absence from St. John's College to act as Headmaster. Mr. Corwith Cramer, Jr. took over the next year. Under Mr. Cramer the first class of eighth graders graduated from the school in the June of 1963. The following year, a Kindergarten was added.

In 1964, Mr. Edward P. Oviatt was engaged as headmaster. Under his direction, planning for a secondary program was started in 1965. A transition class, one between kindergarten and first grade, was added under the direction of Mrs. Charles Borden in 1966.

That summer, the main level of the barn had been renovated for classrooms and library space. Last summer, 1967, the basement of the barn was redone in a modern style with extra space for out of class studying.

In the early spring of 1967, Mr. Thomas K. Simpson, President of the Board of Trustees, made the announcement that Key School would start their secondary program the next fall. This past fall, when school started, the program was officially under way.

Plans for the Future

by Edward P. Oviatt--Headmaster

All elements of the faculty and Board have worked hard over the past few years with a master planning architect, supported by a generous foundation grant, to develop a master plan to implement the aims of a Key School curriculum, kindergarten through the twelfth grade. A large model residing in the headmaster's office shows pictorially the results of this study. In the plans are a science building with facilities for regular out-of-class use, supervised by what might be called a "librarian", a technician who would be on hand to supervise and aid in the use of equipment at any time during the day, much in the same way that the librarian serves the library; a physical education center in three parts, the first to be a small gym to take over the assembly function, provide covered half-court basketball practices, and of course all important locker and shower facilities; second, a pool, and third a large gymnasium; a large new library building with administrative offices, lounge area for faculty and students, and most important of all, independent study facilities including office-carrels for all students in the upper grades, three students to an office, giving a place to store research materials as well as a place to work during unscheduled time--an interesting concept in answering the need for a private place to do responsible independent work; a dining hall; and a possible ultimate replacement of the house as a class-room building for the the early grades.

Throughout, we have been fortunate to have an imaginative architect, sympathetic to the highest goals and spirit of the school. Much of the hardest work has been accomplished, and the school is now ready to enter a bold fund-raising period to realize the dreams of the founders.
